We are more than willing that the Lebanon Herald's brilliant editor shall be our next State Printer; because he is worthy to represent the country press. Beside being the most accomplished litterateur of all the State editors, he is a practical printer, and knows when work is well or badly executed. He is an unmerciful critic, and this will cause him to personally superintend all the work that has his name on it, in order that it be above criticism. At the last election for State Printer, Jones, Purvis & Co.,—representing the two daily papers at Nashville—gaye only one reason for re-election, and that was, justification from the assaults made upon them by John Baxter. They said that if they were not re-elected. said that if they were not re-elected, Baxter's charges of malfeasance against them would be considered as sustained; and as the two papers represented the Democratic party of the State, Jones, Furvis & Co. were re-elected State Printers.
